III) ANALYSIS

INTRODUCTION

Good morning to everyone. I am glad to be here with you today to discuss the answers to your questions blab blab blab blab

You write whatever is said before the first question is asked and/or given.

Question 1:

Income inequality, measured by the earnings gap between the rich and the poor, has been growing in the United States since the 1970s. As of 2014, the average income of someone in the nation's top one tenth of one percent (0.1%) was over one hundred eighty four (184) times the average income of someone in the bottom ninety percent (90%). Income inequality plays a role in the income achievement gap, the gender wage gap, the health gap and among other inequalities, that relate all of them.

The test scores of children from high-income families pulled away from those in low and middle-income families, in a period coinciding with a growing segregation of neighborhoods and schools by income. From 1998 to 2010 studies suggest that federal and state level governments can focus on policies that improve early childhood education for low-income children. However, it is unclear whether these improvements will hold steady as children get older.

Please, explain your point of view for;

- a) correcting the segregation of neighborhoods and schools by income
- b) making up for the gap in education with lasting effect

Woman now hold more than half of the country's jobs in professional and managerial occupations. Yet the gender pay gap persists, with woman working full-time making seventy nine cents ($0.79) for every dollar ($1.00) earned by men. Half of the gender wage gap is due to women working in different kinds of occupations than men.

Please, explain your point of view for;

- a) correcting the persistent gender pay gap
- b) securing a greater number of woman holding higher
